Not everyone happy to see the president on campus

Associated Press

SOUTH BEND, Ind. He got heckled. Air Force One flew into airspace where hours earlier a plane had trailed a banner showing an aborted fetus. But President Obama appeared unruffled Sunday at the University of Notre Dame.

Obama's appearance at Sunday's commencement capped weeks of protests that have seen Notre Dame become the center of an abortion debate that threatened to overshadow the commencement ceremony. Protesters have criticized the university's decision to invite Obama, who supports abortion rights and embryonic stem-cell research.

Students opposing the Obama invitation had urged peaceful protests. Hundreds of people attended an outdoor mass and rally Sunday, and some students who decided not to attend the commencement later went to the campus Grotto for prayer.

Victor Saenz, a philosophy graduate from Mexicali, Mexico, said he did not attend the ceremony because he believes Obama's invitation violated a 2004 statement adopted by U.S. bishops saying Catholic institutions should not honor those who don't adhere to church teachings.

"It was something I just couldn't do," Saenz said.

Bishop John D'Arcy, whose diocese includes Notre Dame, joined the rally on the south quadrangle and called students "heroes" for expressing their anger over the invitation to Obama.

Police said at least 39 people were arrested on trespassing charges, including Norma McCorvey, the plaintiff identified as "Roe" in the Roe v. Wade Supreme Court decision that legalized abortion, was among those arrested. She now opposes abortion.

Obama's address

Protesters gather but don't overshadow speech at Notre Dame

Chicago Tribune

SOUTH BEND, Ind. President Obama on Sunday called for greater understanding on both sides of America's abortion debate as he delivered a much anticipated University of Notre Dame commencement address and sought to quell a divisive controversy.

"I do not suggest that the debate surrounding abortion can or should go away," he said.

"At some level, the views of the two camps are irreconcilable. Each side will continue to make its case to the public with passion and conviction. But surely we can do so without reducing those with differing views to caricature."

Since Obama's late March acceptance of the university's invitation to speak, a national furor has brewed over whether such a prominent supporter of abortion rights and embryonic stem-cell research should be honored at one of America's premier Catholic universities.

GOP LEADER SAYS HONORARY DEGREE 'INAPPROPRIATE'

WASHINGTON The chairman of the Republican Party says the University of Notre Dame should not award an honorary degree to President Obama.

GOP Chairman Michael Steele says Notre Dame is right to be honored that Obama spoke at Sunday's commencement. But he says granting Obama an honorary degree is "inappropriate." Steele spoke Sunday morning on NBC's "Meet the Press."

All of the graduates stood and applauded as Obama, dressed in a blue gown, received his honorary degree.

Before the ceremony, the scene was mostly tranquil on campus, with few signs of protests, as graduates in suits, dresses and black robes walked and snapped photos under a cool spring sun with family members.

As a candidate and as president, Obama has promoted policies popular with abortion rights supporters, while also suggesting that he wants to rise above the rhetoric that often surrounds the issue. The Notre Dame event, however, has become a rallying point for abortion-rights opponents during a time when Obama's presidency is weighing heavily on them as he prepares to pick a Supreme Court justice to replace retiring Justice David Souter.

Obama delivered his first commencement address as president on Wednesday at Arizona State University, where he used subtle humor to confront a less-intense controversy over the school's decision not to award him a ceremonial diploma.

"These honorary degrees are apparently pretty hard to come by," he said at the start of Sunday's speech. "So far I'm only one for two as president."

BUZZ ME

See something in social media or online that's got you and your friends talking? Let me know about it. If I use it, I'll be sure to give you credit right here.

TWEET OF THE WEEK

@marialavis If I could replace sound of cars with drone of bees, my chair with a log & this carpet with wildflowers that would be magic.

The Twitter connection

This column started with a mistake.

When RedEye printed an incorrect photo last week, we received hundreds of calls, e-mails and tweets making sure we knew about it.

And while we ran a correction in the paper the next day, as is customary in the newspaper industry, social media has changed the way we communicate with the people who read us.

"No, we weren't checking to see if you were on your toes—that photo is our mistake on today's RedHots. We're sorry. Thanks for the heads up," is what I posted to Twitter shortly before 9 a.m. Monday—about 2 minutes after the first complaint was lodged and I was able to verify it.

I've interacted with thousands of people via Twitter, even helping several get empty newspaper boxes filled, but a correction was uncharted territory. And every time someone deflates my hopes by telling me newspapers are as good as dead, I'm re-energized when I think about what's possible when print and social media are used together.

I've seen businesses embrace the same idea, apologizing for customer service snafus. I've even seen celebrities thank fans for feedback to constructive criticism. At the end of the day, social media is so much more than a bunch of people who don't know each other talking back and forth. It's a personal interaction that can't be duplicated in any other medium that I know of.

I'm reminded by that every time I talk to one of the almost 10,000 people who follow RedEye. I feel like I've made thousands of friends and I look forward to meeting each and every one of you (hint, hint).

What do you think about newspapers embracing social media? Tweet me, poke me—just tell me. I might just print your reply. And if I screw up, I'll correct it.

Has pop gone

By Alexia Elejalde-Ruiz | REDEYE

Move over, cigarettes. Trans fats, please make room. The battle to improve Americans' health is zeroing in on a new target: Pop.

"I believe soda is the next tobacco," said Barry Popkin, director of the University of North Carolina's Interdisciplinary Obesity Center and author of "The World is Fat," published this year. Soda drinkers haven't achieved pariah status like smokers before them, but proposed sugar taxes and social pressure to be healthy can put a damper on doing the Dew—and even some in the growing ranks of diet pop drinkers are feeling soda shame.

According to Popkin, Americans are consuming up to 300 more calories per day now than they were 25 to 30 years ago, and two-thirds of that increase is from caloric beverages like soft drinks, sports drinks, energy drinks, fruit juice and milk.

While milk has important vitamins and minerals, the sugary beverages "have no health benefits," Popkin said. And studies show people who drink caloric beverages don't compensate by cutting out other food, so the calories add up, he said.

An article in the April 30 issue of the New England Journal of Medicine put it bluntly: Sugar-sweetened beverages "may be the single largest driver of the obesity epidemic," it said.

The article, co-authored by Kelly Brownell, director of the Rudd Center for Food Policy and Obesity at Yale, and New York City Health Commissioner Dr. Thomas Frieden, makes a case for imposing hefty taxes on sugary drinks to curb consumption. A proposal in New York last year to impose a 1-cent-per-ounce tax on sugared beverages could be expected to reduce consumption by 13 percent, or about two servings per person per week, according to the article.

A federal tax on sugary beverages is one of many proposals Congress is considering as it debates how to pay for a $1.2 trillion overhaul of the health care system, according to a report in The Wall Street Journal. The Congressional Budget Office estimated that adding a tax of 3 cents per 12-ounce serving of sweetened drink would generate $24 billion over the next four years.

The notion of a soda tax riles some die-hard pop fans.

"Stop taking away the things I enjoy," said Chicagoan Jaime Groth, 26, as she sipped a ginger ale during lunch recently. Groth, who lives in Bridgeport, was a smoker until cigarettes were taxed out of her reach, and she doesn't want the same fate to befall her soda habit.

"At some point, you know stuff's not good for you," Groth said. "People should be able to make their own decisions."

Two states—Maine and New York—that tried to impose large soft drink taxes in the past year have not succeeded.

Chicago currently taxes soft drinks at the general merchandise rate (10.25 percent) instead of the food rate (2.25 percent), because soft drinks are not considered nutritious, but there's no official proposal in the city, county or state to impose a heftier soft drink tax.

Tracey Halliday, spokeswoman for the American Beverage Association, a trade group representing beverage distributors, said proposed taxes on sugary beverages are "a pure money grab" and unfairly discriminate against one product. She batted away soda's comparison to tobacco, "a known carcinogen."

"There is clearly no comparison between tobacco and soft drinks," Halliday said. "People are not buying it."

Health-conscious consumers are, however, increasingly turning away from regular soft drinks in favor of diet alternatives.

The regular soft drink market lost 15.6 million adult drinkers from 2003 to 2008, while the diet soda market gained 7.8 million drinkers, according to Mintel, a Chicago-based market research firm. People also are increasingly drinking bottled water, energy drinks and sports drinks, Mintel found.

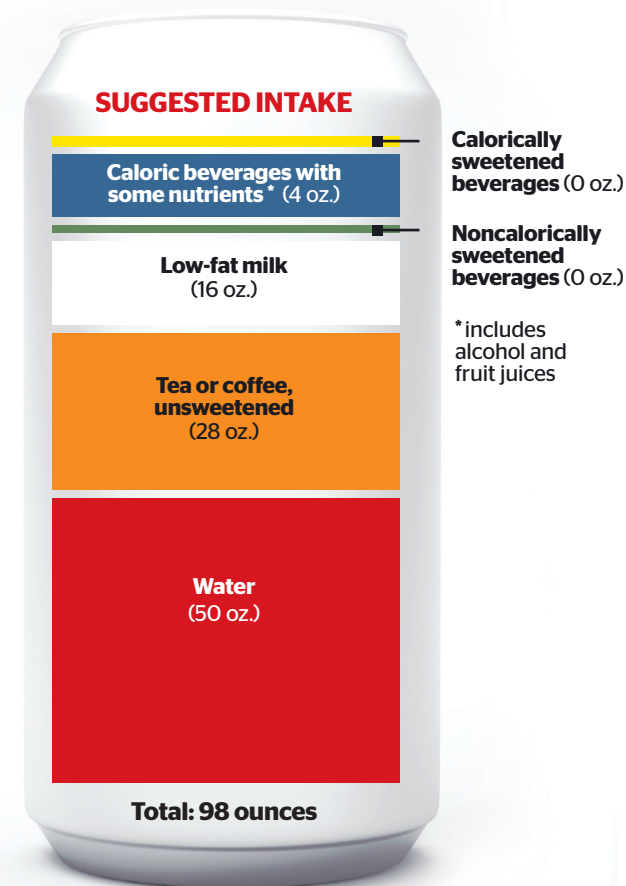

Weight maintenance and concern about the health risks of high fructose corn syrup were the biggest reasons cited for moving away from Sweetest sin?

Twenty-one percent of the calories Americans consume every day come from beverages—up from 14 percent in 1977—largely from soft drinks, which offer no nutrients.

The Beverage Guidance Panel, an independent group of leading nutrition scholars, has proposed a system, similar to the government's food pyramid, to guide people to more healthful beverage consumption. While all fluid needs could be met with just water, the panel suggests how to incorporate a variety of beverages healthfully.

The following breakdown of what the panel recommends Americans should be drinking each day was published in the American Journal of Clinical Nutrition.

pop, and Mintel does not expect much growth in artificially sweetened beverages as people steer clear of chemicals. Rather, people will be willing to pay more for naturally sweetened beverages, Mintel predicts.

"I don't trust the aspartame in diet [soft drinks] or the sugariness of regular soda," said Jane Boateng, 26, of Gage Park.

Some diet pop drinkers feel pressure to kick the fizzy stuff altogether.

Lacey Brenly of Wrigleyville admits to a Diet Coke addiction that dates back to college, when, she claims, she switched from regular pop to diet and lost 10 pounds.

Hooked on the bubbles, Brenly, 26, said she drinks at least three Diet Cokes a day, which draws tsks from some of her friends.

"I have a lot of friends who are health nuts—who do yoga, shop at Whole Foods—and I get a little flack from them for my Diet Coke consumption," Brenly said.

Brenly, a smoker, said some friends try to convert her to a smoke-free, pop-free lifestyle—but both are tough habits to break. When she attempted a two-week health kick, "the first thing to go was the all-water pledge," she said.

"I always feel pretty guilty about it, like when people started recycling," Brenly said. "I feel guilty that I'm not trying to be healthier."

Diet sweeteners have come under fire for conditioning people to want more sweets, and some have been linked to cancer, but Popkin said there has been no established literature proving that diet sweeteners are harmful or cause weight gain. Researchers with the Framingham Heart Study published a study two years ago that found people who drink one or more soda per day—diet or regular—are nearly 50 percent more likely than non-soda drinkers flat?

Diet sweeteners have come under fire for conditioning people to want more sweets, and some have been linked to cancer.”

to develop risk factors for heart disease, but the study author said that could be because people who drink soda also tend to eat more and exercise less.

To Popkin, sugary drinks are the known culprit, leading to weight gain and increasing the risk for diabetes. Drinking one extra 12-ounce can of regular soda a day, at 140 calories, can cause you to gain 13 pounds in a year, he said.

Monica Flores of Elk Grove Village has struggled to nix regular pop from her diet. Flores, 36, said she gave up Coke and “all brown pops” for Lent this year, and three weeks in she had painful headaches. As soon as Lent was over, she went back to drinking soda.

Flores’ friend Michele Campbell of Chatham said she has no intention of giving up regular soft drinks. Campbell, 39, said she knows the sugary drinks aren’t healthy, but she’s heard plenty of warnings about diet drinks too.

“If I’m going to die of something,” Campbell said, “I’m going to die of sugar.” AELEJALDERUIZ@TRIBUNE.COM

The sweet ‘n lowdown

Diet soft drinks have the sweetness without the calories of their classic counterparts thanks to artificial sweeteners that are many times sweeter than regular sugar and therefore used in much smaller doses. Here’s a breakdown of the artificial sweeteners currently approved by the Food and Drug Administration, plus the new natural sweetener stevia, now available in some foods.

FOUND IN	MORE INFORMATION	HEALTH CONCERNS
Acesulfame-potassium Brand names: Sweet One, Sunett 	Sweetness: 200 times sweeter than sugar Year discovered: 1967 Year FDA approved: 1988	» FDA says studies show no carcinogenic effects, but critics say there hasn’t been enough research. The Center for Science in the Public Interest, a consumer advocacy group, advises consumers to avoid this sweetener, citing possible cancer and thyroid risks.
Aspartame Brand names: NutraSweet, Equal 	Sweetness: 180-220 times sweeter than sugar Year discovered: 1965 Year FDA approved: 1981	» Some researchers have raised concerns about links to brain cancer, leukemia and lymphomas, but the FDA and international food safety commissions say reviews of the many studies and clinical trials on aspartame show there’s no link to any cancers. CSPI recommends avoiding aspartame, citing possible health risks.
Saccharin Brand names: Sweet’N Low, Sweet Twin, Necta Sweet 	Sweetness: 200 times sweeter than sugar Year discovered: 1879 Year FDA approved: Was considered GRAS (generally recognized as safe) when the government began requiring pre-market approval of food additives in 1958.	» Studies linked saccharin to bladder cancer in rats, and the FDA in 1977 recommended it be banned. Instead, Congress required all products containing saccharin to carry a warning label. But human studies showed no consistent cancer link, so in 2000 saccharin was de-listed as a carcinogen and the warning label requirement was repealed. CSPI says to avoid saccharin.
Sucralose Brand names: Splenda 	Sweetness: 600 times sweeter than sugar Year discovered: 1976 Year FDA approved: 1998	» Made with real sugar and chlorine, studies have found no links to cancer, according to the FDA. CSPI says it appears to be safe, but warns that it often is used in conjunction with acesulfame-potassium.
Neotame 	Sweetness: 7,000 to 13,000 times sweeter than sugar Year discovered: 1965 Year FDA approved: 2002	» FDA says there are no adverse effects when ingested at levels used in foods. CSPI says it appears to be safe.
Stevia Brand names: Truvia, PureVia 	Sweetness: 300 times sweeter than sugar Year discovered: French researchers isolated the plant’s sweetness in 1931; had been used for centuries in Central and South Americas. Year FDA approved: Rebaudioside A (or rebiana), a highly purified component of the stevia plant, was accepted as GRAS for use in food in December 2008.	» Derived from a plant, this calorie-free natural sweetener has for decades been used in Japan and elsewhere in Asia and Latin America. Rat studies have shown reduced sperm count, infertility, smaller offspring and DNA mutation. CSPI urges caution, saying stevia needs to be better tested.

Daley defends lakefront parking plan

Chicago Tribune

Mayor Daley on Saturday defended his park board's decision to start charging $1 an hour to park at more than 4,400 spots along the lake that are now free.

The mayor said the new lakefront parking fees are about "revenue and things like that." Chicago Park District officials told the Tribune on Friday the fees are expected to bring in about $700,000 the first year and perhaps as much as $1.5 million in subsequent years after start-up costs are finished.

Retailers were excited about the new parking charge because it will prevent drivers from parking by the lakefront long term, Daley said after appearing at a restaurant trade show at McCormick Place.

"You turn over cars," he said. "A lot of people park there and they go to work."

By early fall, drivers along the lakefront will feed "pay and display" devices with a credit card or cash and get a receipt they can leave on their windshield.

Responding to reporters' questions, Daley also said the nation's "financial crisis is much more severe than people think it is" and again turned thumbs-down on Cook County Board President Todd Stroger's veto last week of an attempt to cut the sales tax by 1 percentage point.

"You cannot ask the taxpayer [to pay] more out of their pocket," Daley said. "People are getting laid off."

When asked about the financial impact of starting to charge families seeking free fun for lakefront parking, Daley did not directly answer. He talked again about the need to more quickly turn over cars at metered spots.

Welcome home, Bear

Bear, a Chicago Police dog that went missing last week during a thunderstorm, was reunited Sunday with his partner Rick King (left) after Howard Overton (right) spotted him near a cemetery on the border between Evergreen Park and Chicago. Bear looked up and cocked his head quizzically and Overton said, "I said, 'That looks like the dog on the news.'"

Weis trying to gauge morale

Chicago Tribune

For months, Chicago police officers have been saying privately that morale at the department is at an all-time low. Now Supt. Jody Weis wants to see just how true that may be.

The department this week launched an online survey of its members, hoping to determine how they feel about morale and stress on the job. The survey, conducted with University of Illinois at Chicago researchers, was intended to examine how well pilot programs for alternate shifts is going but also give Weis a look at overall morale, said Bill Dougherty, first vice president of the Fraternal Order of Police, which represents rank-and-file officers.

The survey, which includes more than 50 questions, asks department members about how their job affects time with their families, their satisfaction with the department and even whether they've considered working for other departments, Dougherty said.

Department members have until mid-June to complete the online survey, and results are expected by the end of summer, police said.

"We want to provide the best workplace environment for our employees," Weis said in a statement. "That is why we are interested in the experiences of our department members and how they are affected by everyday work issues. We encourage everyone to fill out the survey in an open and honest manner."

The department and UIC are promising that those who participate in the survey won't be identified, although they will have to input a code to allow the department to measure responses by years of service and unit.

While the FOP helped to draft the survey, Dougherty said the union hasn't endorsed the survey for its members because it wasn't allowed to take part in the collection of the surveys.

Toddler's death ruled homicide

The Cook County medical examiner's office Sunday ruled the shooting death of a toddler in Austin was a homicide. Jaquan Reed, of Roselle, was shot in the chest, authorities said. The boy was in the residence with two other youths when the firearm was discharged, police said. It was unknown who fired the weapon or whether any adults were home during the shooting.

1 dead in Dan Ryan crash

One man died and four others were injured early Sunday in a multi-vehicle accident on the Dan Ryan Expressway, authorities said. At least four vehicles were involved in the crash about 3:20 a.m. in the northbound lanes near 47th Street, said Fire Department spokesman Quention Curtis. Ricky Robinson, 24, of the 7800 block of South Coles Avenue, was pronounced dead at 3:45 a.m., said a spokesman for the Cook County medical examiner's office.

Man fires shots at police

A 29-year-old Chicago man was charged Sunday after firing shots at Chicago police late Saturday, police said. Police said they fired shots at Sam McClain, of the 1200 block of West 14th Street, after he refused to drop his weapon. No one was hit, police said. McClain fled and was later taken into custody.

Ottumwa, Iowa: The video game capital of the world

7 OTTUMWA, Iowa For a brief shining moment in the 1980s, Ottumwa was the unlikely hot spot of the fledgling video game industry as gamers around the globe flocked to this sleepy Iowa city and its video game arcade for a series of landmark tournaments.

Gamers set world records, the TV show "That's Incredible" broadcast a tournament to a national audience, and then-mayor Jerry Parker dubbed Ottumwa "The Video Game Capital of the World."

The glory days didn't last long. The Twin Galaxies arcade closed within a couple years,

REAL OR JUST A GAME?

City officials are passionate about arcade owner Walter Day's plans, but the idea is mostly a vision backed by a Facebook group with about 800 members.

and memories of Pac-Man and Donkey Kong dimmed for everyone—except arcade owner Walter Day, who dreamed of making Ottumwa into a permanent game destination.

"You know how your average person fantasizes, when they daydream about having a new car or having a beautiful wife or inheriting from their uncle $2 million or something like that? I'm a little bit different," he said. "I fantasize about owning downtown Ottumwa and turning it into the first video game-themed amusement attraction."

It's a calling that's been heard by town officials. In April, they announced plans for an International Video Game Hall of Fame.

Although his arcade closed, Day's scorekeeper status remains. Twin Galaxies, his Fairfield-based company, tracks rankings, high scores and championship tournaments for video games around the world.

The suspect ate my evidence

9 WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. Authorities say a store owner and a patron thwarted a teen accused of trying to carry out a robbery by concealing a banana beneath his shirt to resemble a gun.

Winston-Salem authorities say 17-year-old John Szwalla entered the Internet cafe Thursday and demanded money, saying he had a gun. The owner, Bobby Ray Mabe, said he and a customer jumped Szwalla, holding him until deputies arrived. While they waited, Mabe says the teen ate the banana.

Mabe says deputies took pictures of the peel. Forsyth County Sheriff's office spokesman Maj. Brad Stanley says deputies joked about charging Szwalla with destroying evidence. Szwalla faces a charge of attempted armed robbery.

WESTERN CONFERENCE FINALS ★ GAME 1: DETROIT 5, BLACKHAWKS 2

Saved by the beard

Chicago Tribune

DETROIT Adam Burish jerked his hands to his throat, expecting to feel blood gushing out like a horror movie climax or one of the frightening scenes that have played out on NHL ice rinks.

Instead, wearing a white button-down shirt with no red stains, Burish laughed about the close call from a skate that scraped his throat in Game 1 of the Western Conference finals against the Red Wings. Only a thin pink line was visible beneath his scraggly playoff beard.

"Extra padding," he said of the neck-saving scruff.

Had the skate been a few hairs closer, the potentially serious incident would have made the Blackhawks' 5-2 loss seem meaningless.

In the second period at Joe Louis Arena, Blackhawks winger Ben Eager was upended against the boards. As he flipped, Burish saw the blade moving toward his neck but didn't have much time or room to move completely out of the way.

"When it happened I was scared," Burish said. "I wasn't sure my head was still connected to my body. I just sat there and was like, 'Oh man, am I lucky.'"

Burish's neck had a red smear of blood after the cut, but he required no stitches and continued to play.

Like anyone watching the replay as Burish grabbed his throat, memories of similar but more critical scenarios flooded to the mind, including Burish's memory.

Most infamously, in 1989 Sabres goaltender Clint Malarchuk nearly died when his jugular vein was severed and he received 300 stitches after getting sliced by the St. Louis Blues' Steve Tuttle. He returned to the ice four days after the event that sickened even teammates.

After Burish assured himself he was uninjured, he said he had no problem shaking off the scare. He figured someone else he knows had a harder time with it.

"It's probably harder for my mom to shake if she was watching on TV than it was for me," he said. "I didn't check my phone. I'm sure she's been calling."

Hawks fall back to Earth with Game 1 loss

Chicago Tribune

DETROIT When we last left Patrick Kane and the Blackhawks, they were basking in the glow of a dominating performance in a Stanley Cup playoff-series-clinching victory over the Vancouver Canucks.

After playing his finest game last Monday, Kane's first career three-goal effort had earned him a new nickname of "Hatrack Kane."

Fast forward to Sunday afternoon at Joe Louis Arena, where Kane was left to ponder how the Detroit Red Wings had held him without a shot on goal in the Wings' 5-2 victory in Game 1 of the Western Conference finals.

"When I had the puck they kind of collapsed on me, so I was trying to find the open guy a little bit more," said Kane, who was held scoreless.

"They play a good defensive game. Even their forwards are really good defensively. Sometimes it works to your advantage and [Sunday] it didn't. I have to create more."

The defending Stanley Cup champion Wings used a stifling defense and their high-flying forwards kept the pressure on Hawks goaltender Nikolai Khabibulin as they drew first blood in the best-of-seven series.

Kane wasn't alone in his frustrations as linemate Jonathan Toews—who had scored twice in Game 6 against the Canucks after leading the Hawks in goals during the regular season—was held without a shot during the first two periods and finished with three.

"Let's not get carried away," Detroit coach Mike Babcock said of shutting down the Hawks' top line.

"It's one game. ... It's just one of those situations that [we] had a good [game] and the puck bounced our way."

Hawks or Wings?

The series is only one game old, but now we've seen the teams play. How do you feel about the Blackhawks' chances of beating the Red Wings? Text "game" and the number of your opinion to 87708. You'll get the poll results instantly.

1. Good—they're going to rally and win this series.
2. Bad—the Hawks just don't have it.

The puck actually bounced the Hawks' way in the first period as they got on the board first when Adam Burish pounced on a loose puck in front of the Wings' net and backhanded it past goaltender Chris Osgood for a 1-0 lead. Kris Versteeg's power-play goal early in the third tied it 2-2.

After that it was all Red Wings.

"We pretty much gave them the game," Versteeg said. "We came out strong and we came out hard. The momentum was in our favor and then we had a couple of lapses here and there and too many turnovers.

"That's why they're the most dangerous team in the league. When you give a great team that many chances, they're going to put it in the back of your net."

The Hawks will try to regroup for Game 2 on Tuesday night, when they hope to get more production out of young stars Kane and Toews and their offense in general.

"We have to get that spark back and just play with more of an edge," Toews said. "And we know we have to make a bigger difference in the offensive zone."

The decisive period

When Kris Versteeg scored to tie the game at 2-2 early in the third period, the Blackhawks had a winnable game on their hands. Where did it go wrong? Here's how the rest of the period played out. REDEYE

Mikael Samuelsson scored to put Detroit back in front. Still, the Hawks had plenty of time to get the equalizer.

Dan Cleary, a former first-round draft pick of the Blackhawks, scored his second goal of the game and gave the Wings a 4-2 lead. The comeback just got a lot tougher.

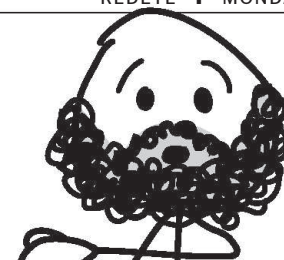

NUCCIO DINUZZO/TRIBUNE

After the Hawks pulled goalkeeper Nikolai Khabibulin for an extra attacker, Henrik Zetterberg slotted an empty-netter. And game. In the end, the Hawks looked like a team that's playing in its first conference finals since 1995 and the Wings looked like defending Stanley Cup champions.

1 Patrick Kane is to playoff beards as Chewbacca is to the "clean" look.	Uh ... he needs to go through puberty to grow one first.	... free parking is to Chicago. Just isn't happening in these parts.	... instant is to coffee.	... I am to playoff eyebrows.
2 How will the Cubs know when to put Carlos Zambrano back in the rotation?	When he's able to body slam a Gatorade cooler without experiencing any pain.	When Lou stops putting him in the batting order.	He'll test the hammy by leg wrestling Lou Piniella. Sorry, that's a bad image.	When his fantasy owners demand it. Shock & awe

While the Cubs on Sunday appeared poised to get one of their stars back this week, the White Sox sent one of theirs to shock wave therapy. Yep ... shock wave therapy. It was a wacky day indeed. Here's the baseball news that got RedEye's attention Sunday—and, of course, our take on the excitement.

SUNDAY'S RESULTS

- » Toronto 8, White Sox 2
- » Houston 6, Cubs 5

QUENTIN'S BIG SHOCK

Amid their dismal series in Toronto, the White Sox sent Carlos Quentin back to Chicago to undergo shock wave therapy. It sounds like a painful psychological experiment, but it's described as a non-invasive method for treating pain in the slugger's left foot. Quentin has been bothered since April 28, when he stepped on a base and felt discomfort that became increasingly painful. Our take: If the Sox lose again Monday, then let's get some shock wave therapy for everyone!

BIG Z IS BACK—OR IS HE?

Carlos Zambrano made a rocky appearance for the Class A Daytona Cubs, then said he'll be ready to return to the team's rotation Friday. "No problems," said Zambrano, recovering from a strained left hamstring, after a 67-pitch outing in which he allowed five hits and walked three batters. "I feel 100 percent. I just had a little problem with my release point. But this week, before my next outing, we'll correct it." Our take: How many hits would he have given up if Soto were behind the plate?

PITCHER BECOMES SLUGGER

Who says American League pitchers can't bat? An error on Tampa Bay's official lineup card forced starting pitcher Andy Sonnanstine to bat against Cleveland. The Rays lost their designated hitter with the mistake, but it didn't matter. Sonnanstine hit an RBI double as the Rays won 7-5 over Cleveland. Our take: Welcome to rock bottom, Cleveland.

TWO DAYS OF REST?

The Angels announced pitcher John Lackey will start Monday against Seattle, only two days after he started against Texas. Why not the normal five days of rest? Lackey's start Saturday—which also was his season debut—lasted only two pitches before he was ejected. Pitch No. 1 sailed behind Rangers leadoff hitter Ian Kinsler's head. Pitch No. 2 plunked Kinsler in the ribs. Buh-bye, Lackey. Our take: Maybe he should aim for the outside corner on his first couple of pitches against the Mariners.

» Michael Phelps lost twice over the weekend at the Charlotte UltraSwim. The swim star fell Sunday to Frederick Bousquet in the 100-meter freestyle and on Saturday to Aaron Peirsol in the 200 backstroke. Phelps also debuted the "windmill" freestyle stroke.

» Bears GM Jerry Angelo on Sunday at the annual Bears Expo discussed troubled receiver Plaxico Burress. "As I said, we'll look at every option," he said. "(His) situation is different because there are circumstances. We'll monitor it."

» Mark Cavendish won the ninth stage of the Giro d'Italia on Sunday but the times did not count in the overall standings because riders—prodded by Lance Armstrong—staged a protest over safety midway through race.

» L.A. Lakers, Orlando advance to NBA conference finals. » Roger Federer beats No. 1 Rafael Nadal in Madrid Open final.

Sandtastic!

Your weekly guide to Chicago's beaches starts now

By Lisa Balde

On Friday, Chicago beaches officially reopen, which means—congrats!—you finally made it to summer. Bring on the swimsuits, sunbathing eye candy and sunscreen-slathered beach bums. To ease you back into sand and sun, we're rolling out weekly rundowns of Chicago beaches as told by the lifeguard hotties—er, waterside rescuers—who know them best. First up is senior lifeguard Sam Jordan. (Hands off, ladies. He's married.)

What's one of the biggest misconceptions about lifeguards?

Jordan: Most people think it's just a summer thing. Whenever I go to a car dealership or apply for a loan, I always get the question, "That's just for the summer, right?" But a lot of people don't know that lifeguarding is a year-round job.

So no one ever thinks lifeguarding is like "Baywatch"?

Jordan: Yeah, I get that a lot—"Baywatch," Nature Boy, things like that. "If I drown, will you save me?": That's the line we hear all the time.

Have you ever saved anyone?

Jordan: Well, sure. There are times when kids go a little too far, and you have to step in. I'm sure every lifeguard has that. We try to prevent those things.

Who's better behaved on the beach: kids or twentysomethings?

Jordan: [Laughs] I would have to say it's about the same.

Would you say each beach you've worked on has its own personality?

Jordan: Definitely. Rainbow Beach is the largest sand beach on the South Side, so there's a lot of area to cover. At Calumet Beach, it's a smaller beach, but I'd say it gets more people than—I don't want to say North Avenue [Beach], but it's very popular, especially on Sundays. 64th Street Beach is more of an adult beach ... 35 and older.

How do you keep alert during shifts?

Jordan: We rotate pretty much every hour so we won't get comfortable and start daydreaming.

What's your favorite part of beach season?

Jordan: My favorite time is in August. The weather's a little cooler, but the waves are a little bigger, especially at Rainbow Beach, because of its location on the lake—I would say between 7- and 10-foot waves. Those types of days are fun to row in. It makes you feel like you're lifeguarding in the ocean instead of just at Lake Michigan.

When to beach:

Most popular weekday:

Jordan: Fridays, because people get off of work and [are ready for] the weekend.

Best day to go if you want the crowded-beach vibe:

Jordan: Sundays, especially at Calumet Beach. It's so crowded that the police have to close the park entrances.

Best day to go if you want to curl up with a beach read and not get smacked in the head with a Frisbee:

Jordan: Monday is the slowest day. As a captain, I'll be scheduled off on Mondays and Tuesdays.

Sobule

Sobule learns it pays to trust fans

Newsday

Singer-songwriter Jill Sobule busted boundaries in 1995 with her "I Kissed a Girl," the first pop hit to address homosexuality head on.

Last year, she broke through boundaries by creating a new way for artists to fund their recordings—by asking their fans for monetary support. The resulting album, "California Years," arrived in stores last month, and she is currently touring to support it.

Does the new album feel more special because of the way it came together?

Completely. I feel like I know what's going on, and it's kind of exciting. I've always been the kind of artist who's always been like, "I'm a spacey, wacky artist" and just let all the other people do all the other stuff and hope they do a good job. And they never did.

So where did the idea for this come from?

The donor thing came because I had no choice, really. I didn't have any money, and the thought of going to a label—they hadn't done a very good job in the past. ... We put up a site, jillsnextrecord.com, and one night I just came up with all these kind of fun levels of donation and I had no idea ... how successful it would be. It worked out better than I ever thought it would—and fast. I had to cut it off, which was a hard thing to do.

The Jill and Julia Show

With Julia Sweeney and Jill Sobule

When: 7:30 p.m. May 29

Where: Lakeshore Theater, 3175 N. Broadway

Tickets: $25 at TicketWeb or 773-472-3492

And what did you think of Katy Perry also using the title "I Kissed a Girl"?

At first, I was like "what the [bleep]?" But then I thought, "OK, even if it wasn't her intention—it was more to write a pop hit, not any kind of sociopolitical agenda—it [started a discussion]." I softened.

Underdog dance revolution

Shawn Johnson and Mark Ballas

Hartford Courant

Being a celebrity doesn't always help on "Dancing With the Stars." When it comes to the finales, it's the celebrity who is most indistinguishable from the professional dancer—anonymous, good-looking, flawless—that gets to grab the mirror-ball trophy.

Last season, it was Brooke Burke, not well-known outside the fringes of cable, who won TV's second most-popular reality competition.

This year the leader seems to be Gilles Marini, a French-born model-turned-actor whose most famous role was a naked cameo in the "Sex and the City" movie. Like race car driver Helio Castroneves, he brings an exotic, handsome flair to the competition.

He also brings some skills: He's landed the most perfect scores: three 30s, two of them last week alone. Altogether, he's led the pack of stars seven times this season. His secret weapon may be Cheryl Burke, the two-time winner herself, who seemed especially driven to prove herself this year.

But the most satisfying winner, in strictly reality TV terms, would be Melissa Rycroft, who was in no way a celebrity until the moment she was chosen as winner of the recent season of "The Bachelor" only to be dropped on the reunion show that immediately followed. After tasting such humiliation on one Monday-night ABC reality show, it's only fitting that she get her full redemption on another.

Like Marini, Rycroft, 26, is sleek and sexy in her costumes and knows how to move. It's tough at times to tell in her own partnering (with Tony Dovolani) who is the professional and who is the star.

The Cinderella story, though, would make Olympic gymnast Shawn Johnson the winner. The youngest competitor in the show's history at 17, she's also the most accomplished, winning a gold medal and three silvers at last year's Summer Olympics in Beijing. She's never scored below an 8 with partner Mark Ballas. And throughout the season, she's grown into her role and the audience may have warmed to her like a father seeing a teenage daughter turn into a young woman.

Aside from being used for guidance purposes as detailed maps, these sturdy waterproof cloths made of microfiber can be used to clean a camera lens, eyeglasses or, in a pinch, a soiled lapel or a smudged chin. And unlike folding maps, which are a supreme hassle, these can be wadded up and stuffed into a pocket or purse; they come out neat as can be.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY TAURUS

April 20-May 20

As an Earth sign, you find money tremendously sexy. Saturn is reminding you that it's much easier to fall in love with someone who has money than to fall for someone who's broke. Dollar signs could be blinding you, though, so be careful.

GET US ON YOUR PHONE

Need your horoscope and don't have RedEye nearby? Head to redeye.chicago.com on your mobile phone.

Gemini

May 21-June 21

A flirty new moon is enhancing your sex drive. You'll make naughty proposals to total strangers and tweet your Twitter followers with updates about your sensual encounters. After all, what good is sex if you can't brag about it afterward?

Cancer

June 22-July 22

It's time to get real. A practical sun is showing you that you need to face the truth. If your looks are so bad that you frighten small children, you're never going to date a super-model. Don't aim so high that you keep disappointing yourself.

Leo

July 23-Aug. 22

You always were a drama queen, but now you're a drama queen to the max. The moon is increasing your addiction to chaos and craziness. Before you have an emotional breakdown, consider chilling out. It's nothing that a few martinis and a trip to a spa can't fix.

Virgo

Aug. 23-Sept. 22

A moon opposition is reminding you about your partner's imperfections. Instead of obsessing about your honey's flaws, maybe you should focus on fixing your own. Turn that passion for improvement inward, and you'll get better results.

Libra

Sept. 23-Oct. 23

A playful sun is putting you in major flirtation mode. You're not ready for anything serious. You just want to have fun. Don't underestimate your powers of attraction. If you're not careful, someone you have just a casual interest in could fall for you, big time.

Scorpio

Oct. 24-Nov. 21

You need to talk things over with someone before you get into too much trouble. The moon is turning up the weirdness factor, and a relationship is headed for Bizarro World. Call up a friend who understands your situation or pay a visit to your therapist.

Sagittarius

Nov. 22-Dec. 21

Three fiery planets are turning you into a sexual dynamo.

You'll stage three seductions in one night or flirt your socks off with 10 people at a party. You need attention, and you need it now. The last thing you'll do is go home alone. Company is required.

Capricorn

Dec. 22-Jan. 19

You've been longing for a true soul mate, and the moon is increasing your tendency to mope. Don't panic. Just because you're not with the love of your life right now doesn't mean that you won't be someday. Be patient.

Aquarius

Jan. 20-Feb. 18

Jupiter is turning you into a total flake. You can barely remember to keep a date, much less remember to call the person the next morning. It's not that you don't care, it's just that your mind is someplace else right now. Be honest about this.

Pisces

Feb. 19-March 20

You're in danger of remaining "stuck." Don't do the same things over and over again. Uranus is urging you to get crazy. Think experimental, creative and wild. Introduce some funky behaviors into the mix as you explore your latest romance.

Aries

March 21-April 19

You're considering a mad affair. If you're single, you could be crushing on a married co-worker. If you have your own spouse, you might be thinking about some sexual exploration outside your relationship. Mars is kicking up your sex drive into high gear.

Text appeal

What if celebrities leaked their texts from last night?

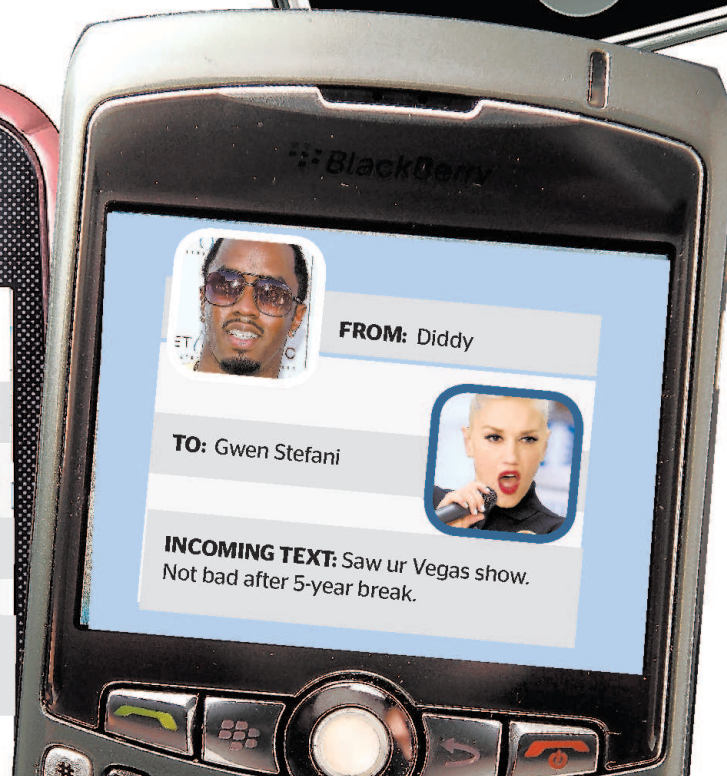

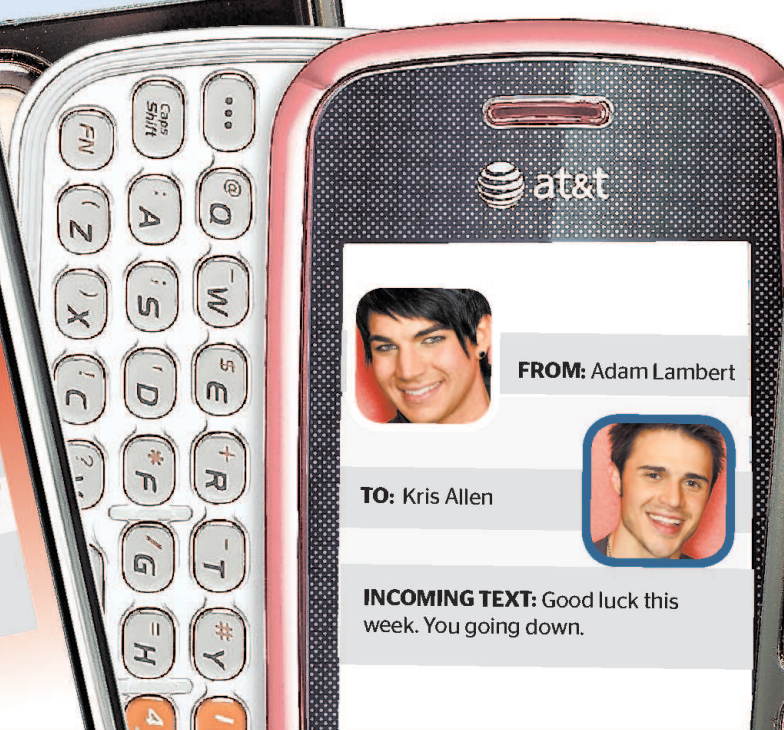

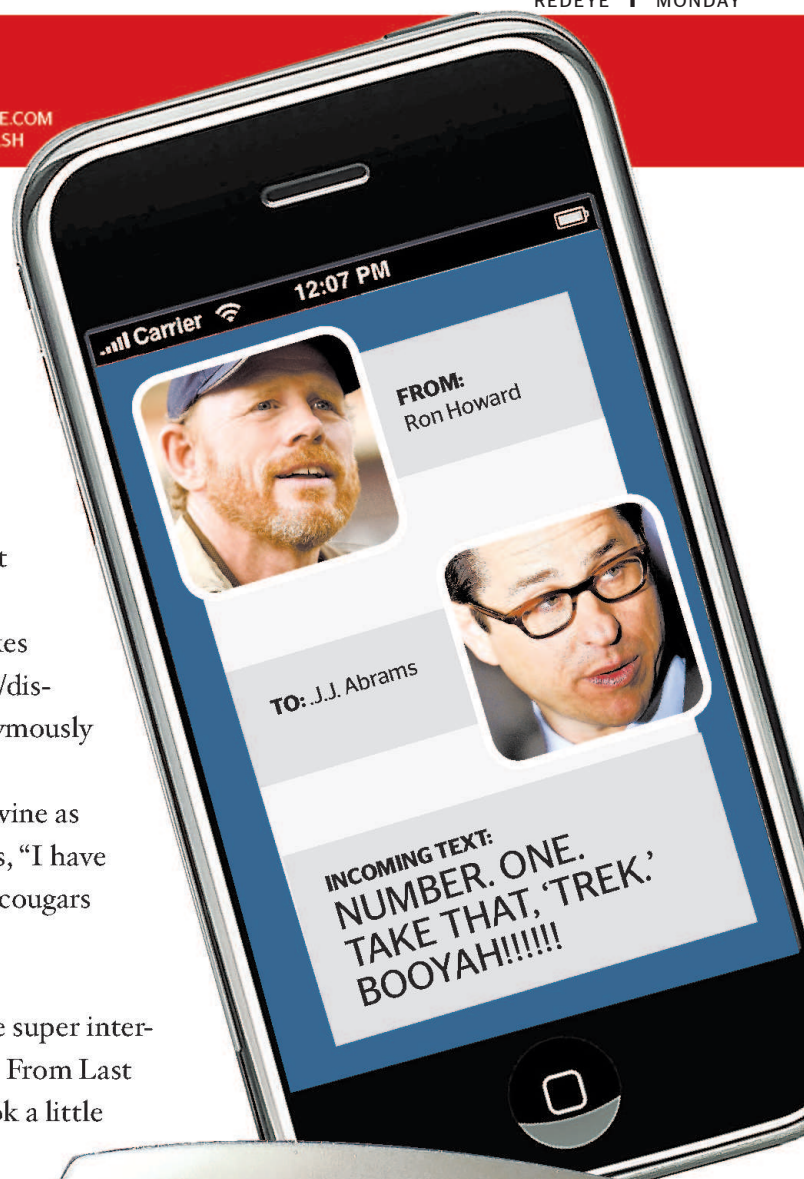

By now you've probably heard about textsfromlastnight.com.

Launched in February, the site takes submissions of funny/embarrassing/disgusting texts and posts them anonymously for all to enjoy.

A typical post? "I used a bag of wine as a pillow last night." Another reads, "I have a feeling we are going to become cougars together."

They're usually pretty funny.

But we're thinking it would be super interesting if celebs got on the Texts From Last Night bandwagon. It might look a little something like this ...

Wentz juggles business, family

Even though Pete Wentz is a rock star with a crazy busy schedule, he's proven in the past week that his family is his No. 1 priority.

Wentz performed with Fall Out Boy May 9 at the Allstate Arena, and after the show he took off back to L.A. to be with his wife, Ashlee Simpson-Wentz, and their son, Bronx, for Mother's Day.

A tired-looking Wentz returned to Chicago the following day to show his support for Illinois Treasurer Alexi Giannoulias, who launched an exploratory committee in March to raise money to campaign for President Obama's former U.S. Senate seat.

Wentz attended the fundraiser at his bar, Angels & Kings, and took photos with Giannoulias' supporters.

Ashlee got to spend time with her hubby later in the week, attending events with him in L.A. By Saturday, though, Wentz was back in Chicago for the grand opening of the Best Buy on Michigan Avenue, where he and his fellow Fall Out Boy band members signed copies of their latest CD, "Folie a Deux."

On Sunday, Ashlee and Pete tweeted wishes to each other for their one-year wedding anniversary. "Eat me.. drink me.. happy anniversary," Simpson-Wentz tweeted. Wentz responded by Twittering: "Can't believe somebody could stand me for a year! Happy anniversary."

Shout-outs

I want to thank the amazing people at Red Bull for taking me up in their two-seater stunt plane used in the Red Bull Air Race World Championship—especially my pilot, Sergio Pla Merino, who made sure we didn't have to "bail out" with our parachutes. Also, be sure to check out "Legally Blonde" as part of Broadway in Chicago.

ROBERT LANGDON VS. SPOCK

Intergalactic battle

Angels or aliens? By a slight margin, moviegoers picked the thriller “Angels & Demons” over “Star Trek” over the weekend—“Angels” taking an estimated $48 million at the box office compared with $43 million for “Trek,” the AP reports. Of course, it was opening weekend for “Angels,” the “Da Vinci Code” sequel starring Tom Hanks. “Trek,” meanwhile, has beamed up nearly $150 million since opening May 8.

So which franchise will keep putting butts in movie theater seats? For that, RedEye turns to a quick faceoff between lead characters: Robert Langdon vs. Spock. What, you were expecting some kind of higher Vulcan logic?

Tom Hanks as Robert Langdon

OCCUPATION

LANGDON:
A university professor who unravels murder mysteries on the side.

SPOCK:
First officer aboard the U.S.S. Enterprise.

COMBAT SKILLS

LANGDON: Is pretty good at running toward and away from danger.

SPOCK: Can beat you up and/or shoot you down.

CAN PUT PEOPLE ASLEEP WITH ...

LANGDON:
A lecture on symbology.

SPOCK: A pinch on the neck. Super cool.

WINNER: Based on early momentum, Mr. Spock and “Star Trek” will live long and prosper in theaters.

Zachary Quinto as Spock

THE VELVET ROPE

Welcome back

Will Ferrell—and a horde of other guest stars—returned to the “Saturday Night Live” studio to turn the season finale into a madcap reunion. Surprise appearances ruled the night, including “SNL” alums Norm MacDonald, Maya Rudolph and Amy Poehler. Tom Hanks, Anne Hathaway and Paul Rudd stopped by too. And yes, Darrell Hammond suited up as Sean Connery for another round of celebrity Jeopardy!

Hey baby—looking good

Let there be No Doubt: Even after five years away, Gwen Stefani and Co. can still bring it. “You always remember your first show of any tour,” Stefani told the crowd Saturday as the band kicked off its tour in Las Vegas, people.com reported, “and so far, so, so, so good.” Diddy and Tiger Woods were among the luminaries taking in the show.

Married ... really

Looks like reality succeeded where reality TV couldn't: Chicagoan Jen Schefft, a veteran of ABC's “The Bachelor” and “The Bachelorette,” is happily married. The “Better Single Than Sorry” author and her fiancé, Joe Waterman, got hitched Friday night at Spiaggia restaurant downtown, people.com reported. Schefft and Waterman met on a blind date in February of 2008.

Jennifer Love Hewitt and Jamie Kennedy are taking their romance to the next level—by starring in an indie movie together. “Cafe” will feature Hewitt as a battered woman who works in a Philadelphia coffee shop and Kennedy as a drug dealer. “I love getting to wear my fake tattoos. I have a really fun character even though she has a rough life,” Hewitt told philly.com.
